Abstract: Introduction: Thematic Apperception Test probes the psychodynamics of the individual’s personality. It is the projective technique commonly used in clinical and non-clinical settings. It reveals the action and counteraction of the forces depicting needs, wishes, conflicts, anxieties and defenses of individual’s personality. Objectives: To assess and compare the psychodynamics of 25 years male substance users. Methods: In this present study a comparison was made between two 25 years male substance users. TAT was administered on them after detoxification phases. Results: Findings highlighted one person (Brown Sugar Addict) has adequate self-image, perceives the environment as friendly and congenial. He reveals need for achievement and recognition. He has autonomy/compliance conflict and defenses he recourses to sublimation. While other person (Buprenorphine addict) shows degraded self-image, need for achievement fused with aggression. Conflict between intra-extra aggression results in isolation and withdrawal tendency. Conclusion: Thus it could be concluded that TAT reveals covert and overt personality dynamics beautifully by story telling. The present study follows the steps in this direction. Further replication is needed for confirmation of the present study.

INTRODUCTION

Thematic Apperception Test probes the Psychodynamics of the individual’s personality. It is the projective technique commonly used in clinical and nonclinical settings. In a procedure such as the TAT, the subject is asked to perform a complex task. His mind runs freely, that is, to induce some self-exclusion of the ego. The subject is asked to tell a story about the picture, to tell about what is going on, what led up to the situation and what the outcome will be. As in free association and artistic production, performance on the TAT and other projective techniques presupposes on oscillating functions of the ego. ‘The letting go’ gives us the drive content thus far primarily studied in projective methods. By observing the oscillating functions and the defenses against the drive material the ego strength could be inferred.

The ability to relate to and from the latent to manifest – from the projective test to actual behavior – has been considered the crucial problem of projective testing. A good analyst would never interpret a dream from the manifest content without knowing the life situation. Similarly the psychologist should only interpret the unconscious data, in the light of, and in the complementation of behavioral data. The ego must be considered the intervening variable between the latent and the manifest level. TAT reveals the action and counteraction of the forces depicting needs, wishes, desires, anxieties, conflicts and defenses of the individual’s personality.

In this present study a comparison was made between two 25 years male adults.

RESULTS:

1) Subject 25 years old unmarried male adults
